

PAKALAKI MEMORIES

My father had decided on the Young Hotel because of Grammas weakness for sweets. The hotel boasted the best bakery on Oahu. He also figured she had a nostalgic interest in that hotel because shed jitterbugged with Alan Ladd in its ballroom. Despite the bakery and the memories, Gramma was leery about sleeping alone in a city she considered the crime center of the Pacific. She never ventured out by herself. One night a drunk sailor banged on her door and begged Lucky Linda to come out. Gramma buzzed room service and ordered a butcher knife.
