

The Tachyon Motivated Christmas Tree Light-Sail Smorgasbord. Notes On Novel Light-Sail Propulsion Methods. Volume 54.

The first new propulsion method conjectured in this new series involves macroscopic space-time expansion and contraction effects for modifying the apparent velocity of a star-ship. Accordingly, such undulations not only effect the perceived translational speed of the craft, but also the wavelengths of the incident matter and energy waves. The inclusion of an operator provides for the abstracted details of the macroscopic space-time expansion and contraction effects as indicated by the functional components enclosed in parenthesis, brackets, and braces in a self-explanatory manner. The second new propulsion method conjectured in this new series involves provisionally tachyonic back-ground, beamed tachyonic matter and energy, and tachyonic matter and energy relativistic rocket effects for modifying the apparent velocity of a star-ship. Accordingly, such mechanisms are assumed to exist and thus modify the velocity of the spacecraft by momentum exchange. An operator provides for the abstracted details of the tachyonic effects as indicated by the functional components enclosed in parenthesis, brackets, and braces in a self-explanatory manner.
